

Kulture Teach Youth Theatre & Writing Workshops

Harkins House is proud of this initiative which intends to groom the next generation of playwrights. The Kulture Teach Youth Theatre and Writing Workshops are designed to educate youth of color about the history of Black theatre all while enhancing creative writing, professional development and performance skills. After learning about the vast history of African American theatre, the workshop will coach the youth into preparing a monologue for a special showcase, organized by the students under the direction of the facilitator.

While this is an arts-oriented project, Kulture Teach contains a unique component because it is designed to meet specific Common Core standards for Language Arts, grades 9-12. In addition, students will interact using an online courseware to offer some college preparation. We are currently enrolling students for Set I which will begin July 19th. The cost of the workshop is $200 per student for four months. For more information and to submit an enrollment form, please visit <http://kultureteach.harkinshouse.net>.
